

Owen Tripp, Co-Founder and Chief Executive Officer Included Health

Owen Tripp is the CEO and cofounder of Included Health, a new kind of healthcare company delivering personalized all-in-one healthcare to millions of people nationwide. Tripp grew Included Health from inception, blending technology and clinical expertise with a human touch to pioneer democratized access to high-quality doctors and medical advice. Today, Included Health offers the most modern and comprehensive care delivery model in the U.S., providing access, answers, and advocacy proven to help people nationwide live more healthy days while reducing unnecessary costs.

Tripp previously cofounded and grew Grand Rounds, an expert medical opinion company, and Reputation.com, the global leader in online reputation and privacy management. Prior to that he held leadership positions at eBay and Accenture. Tripp has been honored as the Most Beloved CEO by Rock Health and was named to Goldman Sachs' list of the 100 Most Intriguing Entrepreneurs. He's led companies to accolades including World Economic Forum Technology Pioneer and Fast Company's Most Innovative Companies. He is a trusted voice and regularly contributes to industry and national platforms including STAT News, CNBC, Bloomberg, Harvard Business Review, Fortune, HLTH, and others.

Tripp earned his BA with honors from Trinity College and MBA from the Stanford Graduate School of Business.

Dr. Ami Parekh, Chief Health Officer Included Health

Dr. Ami Parekh, MD, JD, is the Chief Health Officer at Included Health, where she leads the strategy, operations, and quality for their national primary care, urgent care, behavioral health, clinical navigation, and population health management practices. Her past awards include the Fierce Health Care's Woman of Influence award as SF Business Times Most Influential Women in Business. She also services on the blue Cross Blue Shield of Massachusetts Board of Directors.

Prior to Included Health, she was Chief Medical Officer for Population Health and Clinical Integration for UCSF Health. While there, she built the clinical, analytic, and organizational infrastructure to take on financial risk for populations leading to improved outcomes for patients and increasingly sustainable models of care. She also served on the founding Board of Canopy Health, a regional health plan. She was recognized with teaching awards and population health leadership awards as well as by being selected as a California Health Care Foundation Fellow.

Ami completed her Internal Medicine Residency at Harvard's Brigham and Women's Hospital. While there, she was selected to be a Chief Resident at Faulkner Hospital. She attended Yale Medical School and Yale Law School where she spent summers working on Capitol Hill and served as the co-convenor for Obama's 2008 campaign Health Policy Committee. She graduated Phi Beta Kappa from Williams College majoring in political science and biology.